

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

BACK there on the colourful streets of Sentul, an auntie extends a large plastic bag weighted with plump curry puffs. "Ambik! Ambik!" she gestures, insisting that bashful walkers load up on their carbo-fuel for the journey ahead. She's from the neighbourhood, you can tell, who's simply out greeting her guests. Back there just metres from the Chow Kit Monorail, a drinks and fruit seller guides his vehicle into the thick of the moving crowd. He stops. One hand waving to the people around him, the other grabbing packets of pre-cut fresh fruit, he offers: "Ambik! Ambik!" There is the pakcik in his jubah on Jalan TAR, a crate of mineral water before him. Same gesture, same words pretty much.

Something's different today. You feel this is one special Sunday.

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

This is Straw Hat culture. Unyielding in principle and unbounded in warmth.

From left, they aimed backs of heads towards the capital with side of the message wall called

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

And on this Sunday, the 13th day of the 11th month, the year is greeted with 20,000 friends spilling in

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

Railway before Measuring the final, the group make the way to the village, resting at Kampung

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

And so we will begin today's shooed away to develop the walk. The size of the walk - the

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

Bank managers, financial advisers, corporate stiff... whoever imagined they'd be puffing their

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

Whoever said Mahjong Sundays can never ever be violated?

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

People Doing Things. It is borne of this that the Malaysian flag flies.

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

You just want to pickle it and preserve the moment.

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

Available at <http://www.tnta.be/interimdoc/2009/interimdoc14/MTHolcroft-Bentham-Morales-2009.htm>

Only to be met with this.

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel
Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

night. the misdeeds they've done are obvious message by any measure. They will camp here for the

A People's Walk

Written by straits-mongrel

Thursday, 29 November 2012 23:55

So far, in the 14 days since the tragedy, it's been a goodly mix of people, from the local to the national, who have taken the time to go to the cemetery, walk the grounds, and