

By Malaysian Born

ONE after another, we have read and seen, either first hand or otherwise, accounts of July 9th. Of BERSIH 2.0.

merosakkan harta-benda!" He turned and stopped but still perched on the ledge. Again, I shouted the same thing, this time adding, "Ini perhimpunan aman." He jumped down.
This guy looked rough and tough. But he listened. Ego gave way to the greater good. He didn't look like the kind who'd listen to a woman. In fact, he looked like he was going to hurl abuse at me the first time I shouted at him, and for a split second, I was takut.
I think, nay I know, many saw the other side of their fellow rakyat in a different and positive light last Saturday. A new exchange has begun. They will go back to share their observations in their own circles.
The ripples have started to spread. Good, cantik ripples.

And now, hope rekindled Tuesday, 12 July 2011 00:57