

The two faces of Sekinchan

Written by straits-mongrel

Tuesday, 22 September 2009 16:23 - Last Updated Wednesday, 23 September 2009 14:49

The two faces of Sekinchan

Written by straits-mongrel

Tuesday, 22 September 2009 16:23 - Last Updated Wednesday, 23 September 2009 14:49

For generations, it fed the central west coast of the peninsular with, not one, but two staples. Sekinchan, about a 2-1/2-hour drive from Kuala Lumpur along coastal trunk roads, throttles on two main economies: seafood and rice.

Its community is a study in contrasts. A riot of colours on fishing boats that dot the riverines...

The two faces of Sekinchan

Written by straits-mongrel

Tuesday, 22 September 2009 16:23 - Last Updated Wednesday, 23 September 2009 14:49

The two faces of Sekinchan

Written by straits-mongrel

Tuesday, 22 September 2009 16:23 - Last Updated Wednesday, 23 September 2009 14:49

By the time I wrote the initial draft of this article, I was not even aware of the existence of this page on the Internet. This page is a good example of how the Internet can be used to spread information.