GORGE on a palkova. Savour a kharahi chicken. Wash in masala tea. Then there's Esfahan beryani, a full-bodied Iranian entree, where the only place it can be found in Malaysia is in a quaint eatery along Jalan Raja Laut in the Chow Kit district of KL. All within a 20-minute stroll from each other.

Food - one of the last remaining cultural totems yet to be politicised in Malaysia, thankfully - finds its full glory in this district acknowledged for its delirious diversity. Be they sold in shops or pushcarts, these little gems could be located on busy streets or tucked away in a lesser-known backlane; quite a challenge for the non-Chow Kit native. Hence, 15 teens are working to help show you the gastronomic wonders of the locale.
