For a Sunday morning, in slow-to-wake KL, 9am would be a very cruel time to start deep discussions. But a group of young Malaysians had the cheek to think otherwise and even convinced some of the country's most radical and progressive minds to come participate. Sigh...the things people do for a good cause.

Harapan, really
The older man is speaking and the younger man is listening. The older man is holding a pen in his hand. The younger man is looking at the older man with a serious expression. The older man is wearing a dark jacket and the younger man is wearing a light pink shirt. The background is blurred, showing other people in the background.
